INTERIOR

JACKSON PAIGE INTERIORS, INC.

Ask Kristine Paige Kamenstein to share her favorite aspects of design and you can practically hear her smiling before she even responds. As president and principal designer of Jackson Paige Interiors for the last 12 years, Kamenstein revels in the joy of seeing every delicately detailed decision jump to life from a computer screen or piece of paper, into the homes and businesses of her clients. "The design process requires many decisions from all angles; the client, architect, builder and designer," elaborates Kamenstein. "Every successful project deserves genuine curiosity for the client's needs, an absence of ego, and the ability to actively listen." A lot can be said for a good listener, especially in a business that relies on the finite balance of client expectations and subtle professional intuition. "One of my very best friends and co-founder of Jackson Paige Interiors, Sasha Jackson Premoli, sparked my creativity from the very beginning and continues to inspire my perspective on life and design, even after her passing," reflects Kamenstein. Her personalized service and strong sense of design translate her clients' dreams into unique homes, created to accent the joy behind life's little moments. Through pure hard work and honesty combined with a pinpoint focus on the highest quality materials, Kamenstein seamlessly integrates a distinct classical edge with contemporary style.

"Each project should result in design that is truly unique to the client while offering a refined yet bold reflection of their personality and lifestyle."

Q+A

What are the key influences in your work today?

I find creative influences in fashion, art, photography, or anything else that captures my eye in a unique way.

How do you define a successful project?

Every successful project involves honest, timely and respectful dialogue between the client, architect, builder and designer.

How would your clients characterize you?

I rely on my reputation, so I hope my clients see me as hardworking, responsive and honest with a talent for listening.

FEATURES: Sometimes a dramatic flash of color is all a space needs to achieve its potential. We reupholstered our client's favorite 1970's Lucite bench and gave this Pacific Palisades home a vibrant dose of colorful contrast.
